NCFL and JCPS Proposed Contracted Services

Service rendered by the National Center for Families Learning (NCFL) for the Jefferson County Public Schools (JCPS) from the date of contract execution and extending through July 30, 2014 will be divided into three phases. The overarching goals of these contracted services include: 1) To improve literacy levels for preschool students through interactive and intergenerational literacy activities; and, 2) To help prepare preschool students for Kindergarten. Below is a description of each phase, objective, and related activities. The scope of the project will include 40 JCPS early childhood educational staff at the following locations: DuValle Education Center, McFerran Early Childhood Center, George Unseld Early Learning Center, Shawnee Early Childhood Center, and Dawson Orman Early Childhood Center.

Phase 1 (March 31, 2014): Interactive literacy strategies to promote literacy development in the classroom.

Objective 1: Increase the use of research-based interactive literacy activities as instructional strategies in the classroom.

Activities:

- A) Initial site visits: NCFL Specialists will visit a sampling of JCPS preschool classrooms to gain a better understanding of current literacy strategies. This is also an important step to build trust between NCFL and JCPS staff.
- B) Initial professional development session: Based on initial observations, NCFL Specialists will host 2 three-hour initial professional development sessions with 40 JCPS early childhood educational staff to focus on and practice specific interactive literacy strategies.
- C) Coaching: Following the PD sessions, NCFL Specialists will visit each teacher's classroom for an observation/feedback session. Specialists will also share thematic observations in data review sessions (through the Professional Learning Community framework where applicable).

Budget: $21,925

Phase II (May 31, 2014): Interactive and intergenerational literacy activities in the classroom, home, and community.

Objective 1: Improve preschool family engagement in their children's learning using research-based intergenerational strategies.

Activities:

- A) Initial professional development session: NCFL Specialists will host an initial professional development session with 40 JCPS early childhood educational staff to overview and practice intergenerational literacy strategies and how to transition strategies into the home.

- B) Leadership consultation: NCFL Specialists and Directors will work with leadership to explore and define strategies currently used to engage families in JCPS sites.
- C) Material Creation: NCFL will create materials for hosting successful family learning events to highlight interactive and intergenerational strategies that are being used in the classroom. Such materials can be retained by JCPS for future use.
- D) Family learning events: NCFL will provide professional development and coaching services to sites hosting family learning events. Such events will be focused on engaging families in intergenerational literacy strategies. Events will offer a full battery of support services (child care and healthy refreshments). Events will be hosted in alignment with existing JCPS events.
- E) Debriefing sessions: NCFL Specialists will host debriefing sessions with JCPS educators and site parent advisory committees focused on successes and challenges with parent engagement efforts.

Budget: $26,400

Phase III (August 15, 2014): Summer engagement in intergenerational strategies based on inquiry-based learning and informational text from the Wonderopolis Camp What-A-Wonder. Activities will be hosted both on and offline. The target audience for summer programming will include building on existing programming at DuValle as well as Phase I and II families.

Activities:

- A) Invite all participants from Phases I-II: Throughout phases I and II, a bank of contacts will be maintained for all children and families with a connection to the 40 educators targeted through this project. Families from Phases I and II will be invited to participate in Camp What-A-Wonder.
- B) Co-Host family learning events: Work with JCPS summer staff to host family learning events one day a week at two sites for six weeks (12 events total). Events will utilize Camp What-A-Wonder content and materials to engage families on and offline. The family learning events will include a full service (including childcare and healthy food) approach to engagement. The Blue Apple Players will be engaged to provide interactive literacy theater in an effort to make learning come alive for participants.
