Program Strength Areas Based on Evidence of Standards and Indicators

Standard 1: Purpose and Direction

- A focal point has been for students to make a successful transition from Mercer Day. The school takes steps to ensure a smooth transition back to the high school or beyond and a continuing follow-up on each student to ensure their success. Presently they have zero dropouts and all students are successful, most making honor roll grades.

Standard 2: Governance and Leadership

- Leadership has both provided and supported the staff's passion for helping these students to be successful.
- Leadership works to develop an appropriate learning path to success for each student, including work study and options for classes at the local area technology center.

Standard 3: Teaching and Assessing for Learning

- A plethora of hands-on opportunities for students has opened their minds to new learning opportunities they would not have had the opportunity to have in a regular school setting. Students can articulate and demonstrate the use of robotics, a 3-D printer, and drones.
- Hands-on options expand to include a greenhouse, hydroponics and even raising chickens. Other options include a new unit in solar power, including solar panels with plans to use the source to charge the student laptops to underscore practicality and to allow for student self-assessment.
- New projects are ongoing, including an effort to raise meal worms to feed their chickens.
- Students have a broad variety of leaning opportunities including learning about the stock market, a plastic-free month, individualized and group projects to reflect their understanding of reading, etc.
- The use of teacher-led instruction as the primary teaching modality is supported by individualization through Apex, an online program, to insure that standards are met in each subject taught.
- Additional support, with an instructional aid, a math teacher, a PE teacher, and a reading specialist, enhance the teacher-led curriculum. Collaboration with an English teacher from Campbellsville University adds a different dimension to the already strong reading/English program.
- Students are encouraged to read and analyze a variety of genres. The teacher provides individualized reading assignments to meet the reading interest and abilities of the students.
- Reading Plus supports and improves the reading skills of students. Every student has improved their reading level by at least two grades since the beginning of school.

Standard 4: Resources and

- Community support is amazing. Mercer has tapped into speakers such as local authors, representatives from the local solar power company, art classes with a local artist, cooking and relationship classes provided by the local Support System Cooperative Service, etc.
 - Counseling services daily support behavioral skill development and mental health. Individual weekly sessions, and counseling as needed, provide wrap-around services for these students.

Standard/Indicator Program Improvement Summary

- Additional special education services and services of a social worker provide for student needs
- The student interviews reflect that students are successful for the first time in their academic career and appreciate the individualized approach to meeting their needs.

Standard 5: Support

- The district supports the program in a variety of forms, but most noticeably with additional teaching staff, counseling services, good technology services, plus space and resources to meet the individual and ever-changing student needs.
