Scott,

My thoughts include the following.

We are not only facilitating conversations we are reaffirming our belief that hate has no place in WCPS. We are listening to black, indigenous and people of color within our community for their guidance and leadership. Most Importantly, we affirm that education is power. We promise to educate the young minds in Woodford County in a way that expands the horizons and ways of thinking in our children. We acknowledge the plague of systemic racism in our country and promise to do our part to fix it by educating our young people, so that they may fully understand the world they live in, and have the tools to change their world as they grow. We also know at WCPS that our young people are the ones making great and powerful changes in our society.

Our administration, faculty and staff are committed to learning from and listening to them.

thanks,

Dani
