The Oklahoma high school wrestling season will end a little later this year.

The Oklahoma Secondary School Activities Association approved Wednesday an extended season that will include two-week breaks between regionals and the state tournaments and the state tournaments and dual state meets.

The three events typically take place during consecutive weeks. The schedule change will give athletes who may have been exposed to the coronavirus more time between the events.

OSSAA wrestling chairman Todd Goolsby presented the plan to the OSSAA board during Wednesday's meeting before it was approved.
