

Teaching and Learning

4-22-24

Good things are going on in both buildings. We are now focusing on KSA the last fourteen days of school. Our prime window for instruction has been primarily uninterrupted, and we are looking for a good testing window.

Middle school students have been assessed in an effort to “mine the missed”. Results are currently under review by the admin team.

The elementary school is still reviewing reading programs to comply with Senate bill 9. The current review is centering on CKLA. It is a pretty intense and rigorous platform, but it is reputedly believed to be effective.

In relation to Senate Bill 9, there is proposed legislation for this legislative session to link mathematics instruction to the reading bill.

With an eye on KSA, both buildings are preparing for the 24-25 school year. This is personnel reviews, curriculum and instruction reviews and professional development planning.
