

Dear Lexington Sporting Club Directors,

We are writing this email directly on behalf of the coaches and athletic directors of the 11th Region. We are writing this letter indirectly on behalf of the parents and players of schools within the 11th Region. The ideas in this letter are coming from a place of education, as we are all educators, and a place of concern for what seems to be a trend in the youth sports community. The decision of Lexington Sporting Club to force players into making a decision to either join their Academy and follow their "pathway to pro" or to choose to play high school and suffer punitive damages of not getting the chance to break into the Academy team for another 10 months will slow the development of these players, put coaches at odds with the LSC organization, and further fracture the soccer community at large.

When Lexington Sporting Club came to our city the promise was one of galvanizing and strengthening the soccer community in Lexington. Coaches, parents, and players were excited for the opportunity to watch professionals right in their backyard, and for their children and players to be involved with the coaches and curriculum that are associated with that professional organization. Along with that came an initial promise that the club would not interfere with the high school teams.

Later conversations revealed that an academy would eventually be formed with the intent to have those players play during the high school season. For two seasons, a dozen or so players were splitting time between high school and club; however, players were afforded the opportunity to participate in both with no repercussions from either side. Now it seems that there are repercussions, and that there is no model that works for the club for players to do both. On the boys side, we suggested a model that might be Monday-Thursday with their high school and Friday-Sunday with Lexington Sporting Club. This was a "during season" (July 15 - end of October) compromise that we were willing to support. This was presented to Sam Stockley and the club at a meeting in April with the 11th Region Boys Soccer Coaches' Association. We were told at that time that they were willing to work with us, but no other communication on that subject was forthcoming.

High School sports give a sense of community that cannot be gleaned from a club or AAU or even a neighborhood team. High school sports have scholastic benefits that can only be gleaned from being a part of the school sports community. Middle school and high school is a challenging time in adolescence when most students deal with a myriad of issues at home, at school, in their personal lives. Sports provide a sense of structure and accountability for students during these times. It helps to create goals, standards, and gives consequences that matter when failing to meet those standards. The statistics on the success rates of student-athletes vs. those that are not involved when it comes to grades, dropout rate, and discipline issues is astounding.

- Higher school attendance - (2007 NFHS Study 7.4 days missed by HS athlete vs. 8.8 days missed by non-athlete)
- Higher graduation and lower dropout rates
- Higher GPA - (2007 NFHS Study 2.84 for student-athlete vs. 2.68 for non-athlete)

- Perform better in core subjects - (2007 Medicine and Science in S&E - athlete performed 10% better than non-athletes)
- Stronger sense of community and belonging within the school, helping with social relationships and positive mental health
- Mentoring and leadership training through the high school programs as they age up, and have a chance to interact with younger athletes and middle school athletes

We respect what it is that Lexington Sporting Club is trying to do in creating a youth academy that will develop professional players within the Lexington soccer community. However, that is an opportunity and path that is not for most of our players, and even those that have that potential benefit greatly from having the high school experience. On top of that, we have not traditionally hindered players from those aspirations. The high school coaches in this area are well-qualified, knowledgeable, and connected professionals that have developed players in their high school seasons, not holding them back. Having coached boys soccer for over 20 years in this area - both high school and club - there are a few things that we can state with unequivocal certainty:

1. There are players in this area that choose a route that is fully-funded by a professional organization like FC Cincinnati or Nashville SC, and a handful that have chosen that route since it has been offered over the last decade. However, the majority of players in this area have benefitted from playing high school. The area produces high level college players capable of making that jump to the professional level at a rate of 1 every 3-4 years that go the traditional route of high school and club during their high school years.
 - a. Sean Kelley (2006 Dunbar, George Mason University, played USL for Orlando City)
 - b. John Manga (2011 Henry Clay, University of Cincinnati, Drafted by the Colorado Rapids 2016, played USL for Pittsburgh Riverhounds & USL 2 for Ocean City FC)
 - c. Thomas Ueland (2013 Henry Clay, University of Notre Dame, turned down MLS combine invite to go to medical school)
 - d. Mohamed Thiaw (Bryan Station 2014, University of Louisville, drafted by San Jose Earthquakes 2018, played USL for Reno 1868 FC and Miami FC 2018-2020)
 - e. Aime Mabika (Henry Clay 2016, University of Kentucky, Drafted by Inter Miami, currently plays for Toronto FC)
 - f. Diallo Irakoze (Bryan Station 2019, University of Louisville, played for Metro Louisville and USL 2 for Lexington SC)
 - g. Isaac Cano (Dunbar 2023, played for Louisville City and Lexington SC)
 - h. Owen Damm (2023, Woodford County, Louisville City)
2. Our city has approximately 350,000 people. That is our pool of players, sprinkle in the surrounding counties. That is not enough to field a team - year in and year out - that has 11-20 players that can compete at the level that a USL Academy team is competing. The club's answer is to supplement that Academy team with 1st team players that are not getting minutes. There are players that are choosing the Academy model that will get to train with the first team and the Academy team, but they are not getting game minutes. Thus they have given up high school, a model where they would undoubtedly be playing games, in order to basically just train with the groups at LSC. And, if we are being blunt here, some of these players will be replaced or jumped over by players that have chosen high school this fall, once the season concludes...if LSC wants to put the optimal product on the field.

3. Most of these players will play in college, not jump straight into the pros. A club environment, even for a USL academy game, is much different than a college environment. The high school game offers a chance to play in emotionally intense games that are against rivals from other schools and other parts of the state. The college game more closely mirrors the high school game in that regard. Managing emotions on the field and playing in high level, high stakes games in front of 1,000 fans (including your friends and classmates) is different than playing in Pittsburgh on a Wednesday afternoon in front of 25 parents and maybe a college coach or two.
4. High school season is not prime recruiting time. If we are talking about when players get recruited it is not during the college season, by and large. The late summer/fall window that high school runs mostly coincides with the college season, meaning that most coaches and assistants are focused on what they are trying to accomplish with the group they currently have. True, the recruiting process is constant, but they might make it out to a few local games or a large tournament during the season, but not many.

Ultimately, the purpose of this letter is to better understand the decision to drive a wedge into the Lexington soccer community by making kids choose between their high school teams and the LSC Academy team. If given the chance to do both I think we both know that most or all players would choose to do both. When asked to try to find a model where that works, the high school coaches presented possible models to which we got no response. We simply got a meeting where the Academy model was rolled out and in no uncertain terms, according to the presentation, players would be asked to choose to play Academy for 10 months or they could play high school and for their age group team.

We are asking Lexington Sporting Club to reconsider the model that they have rolled out and allow players a path to do both high school and Academy, which would ultimately strengthen all programs. And most importantly it would benefit the student-athletes as players and as people, giving them all of the benefits.

Sincerely,

Central Kentucky Coaches, Athletic Directors and High School Administrators
