Summary of Proposed Changes

- The terminology of "resource classroom" is being replaced with "special class."
- Clear differentiation between allowable numbers in a "special class" and allowable numbers for teacher caseloads.
- Added clarity around class sizes and caseloads when teachers are serving more than one disability category. For both special class size and caseload, it is based on the majority.
- Significant changes with numbers to class sizes and caseloads for all disability categories.
- Continuation of language- Children with disabilities that meet the definition of autism; deaf-blindness; developmental delay; and traumatic brain injury shall be served in regular classes or special classes, as determined by the ARC. (clarity needed)
- Removal of all language around allowable numbers in a co-teaching and collaborative models.
- Overall purpose was the reduce the need for districts to submit waivers to the Kentucky Board of Education. KDE communicated that these are numbers that were consistently being approved through the waiver process.
- Even with these proposed changes, districts still have the option to submit a waiver request.
